SUMMARY

Retail was a good social skills-builder for someone as introverted as me, but while my managers highly valued my work ethic and I was eventually regularly chosen to interact with customers, it was never going to be my career. Online college hadn't worked for me in the past, but I had a lot of newfound motivation when I started at Holberton. I came into it with no coding knowledge and was soon helping others learn new concepts regularly. From struggling to write a basic HTML page, I'm now a third of the way into my specialization in AR/VR and can't wait for the final project in virtual reality. Learning to code has been the most rewarding thing I've ever done, with every language and framework a new adventure.
